

Tamanwit – Tiica'm – Nati'tayt Natural Law – Land - People

Charles F. Sams III, Communications Director
Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation

Tamanwit - Natural Law Being Stood Up – Being Human

Coyote and Human

Gifts of the Land

1st People

Covenants/Promises

Stewardship of Resources

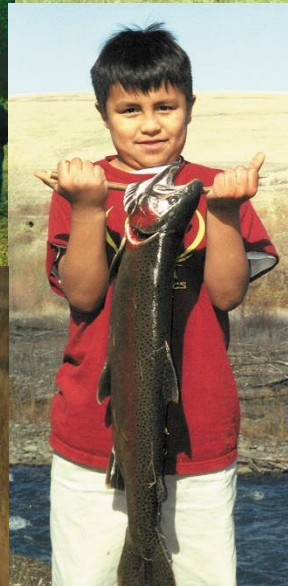

Tiica'm - The Homelands

1st Educational Experience

The Outdoors as Classroom

Protecting what we Love and Loving what we Protect

Nati'tayt - People

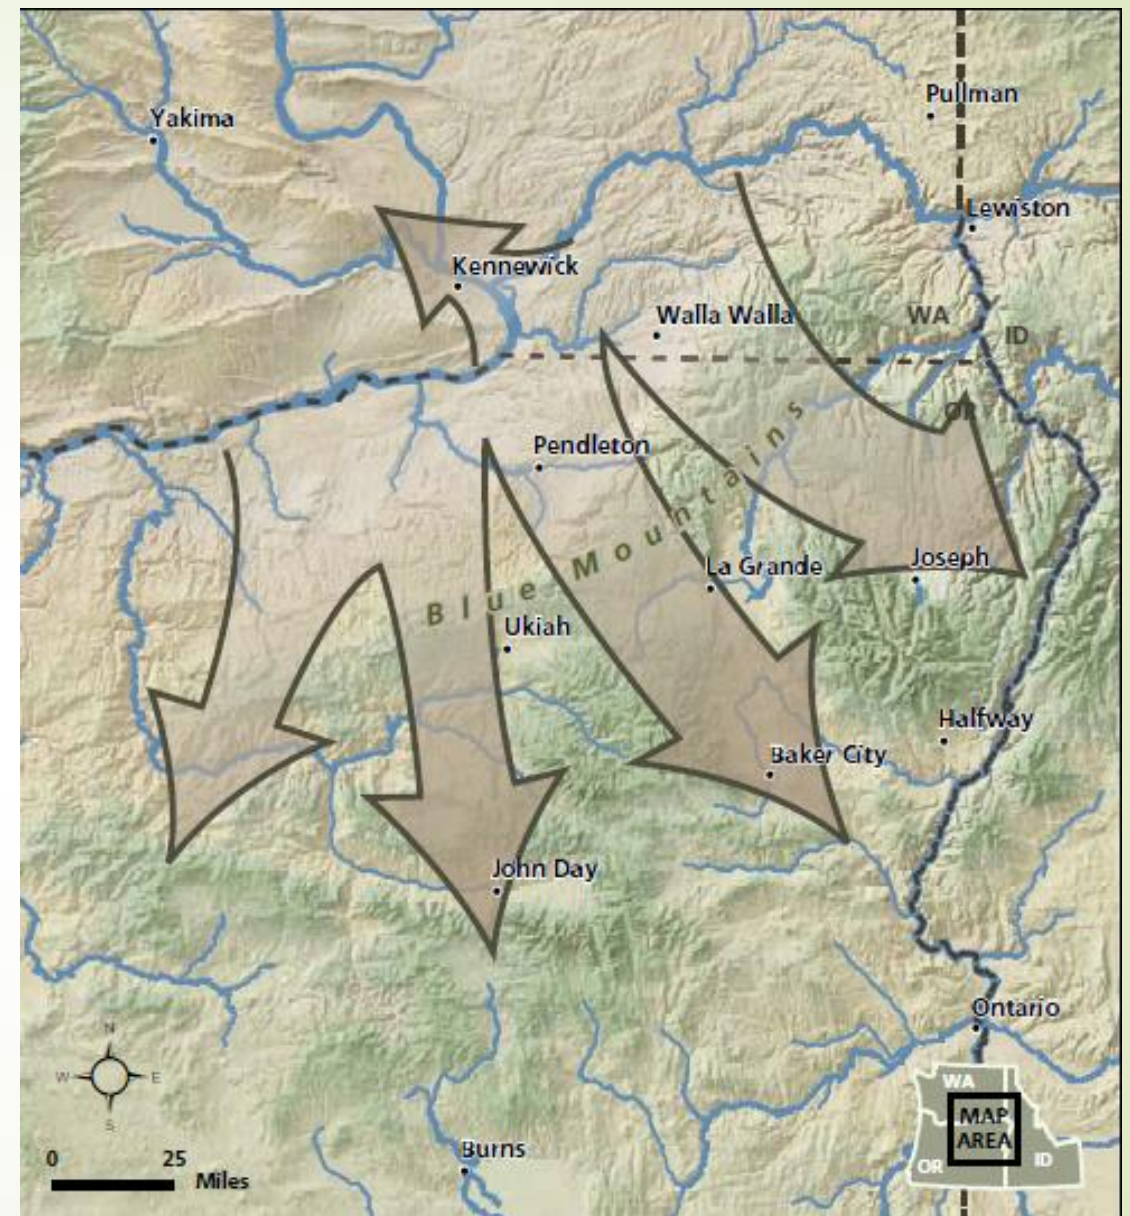

Seasonal Rounds – The Trails that Sustain our Lives

Spring – Gathering of Roots, Medicine, Salmon

Summer – Gathering of Berries, materials for making shelter, clothes, transportation items

Fall – Salmon, Big Game hunting

Winter – Return to Home

SEASONAL HOMES. Seasonal migration patterns flowed in a directional movement along a seasonal round, from the main stems to the tributaries.

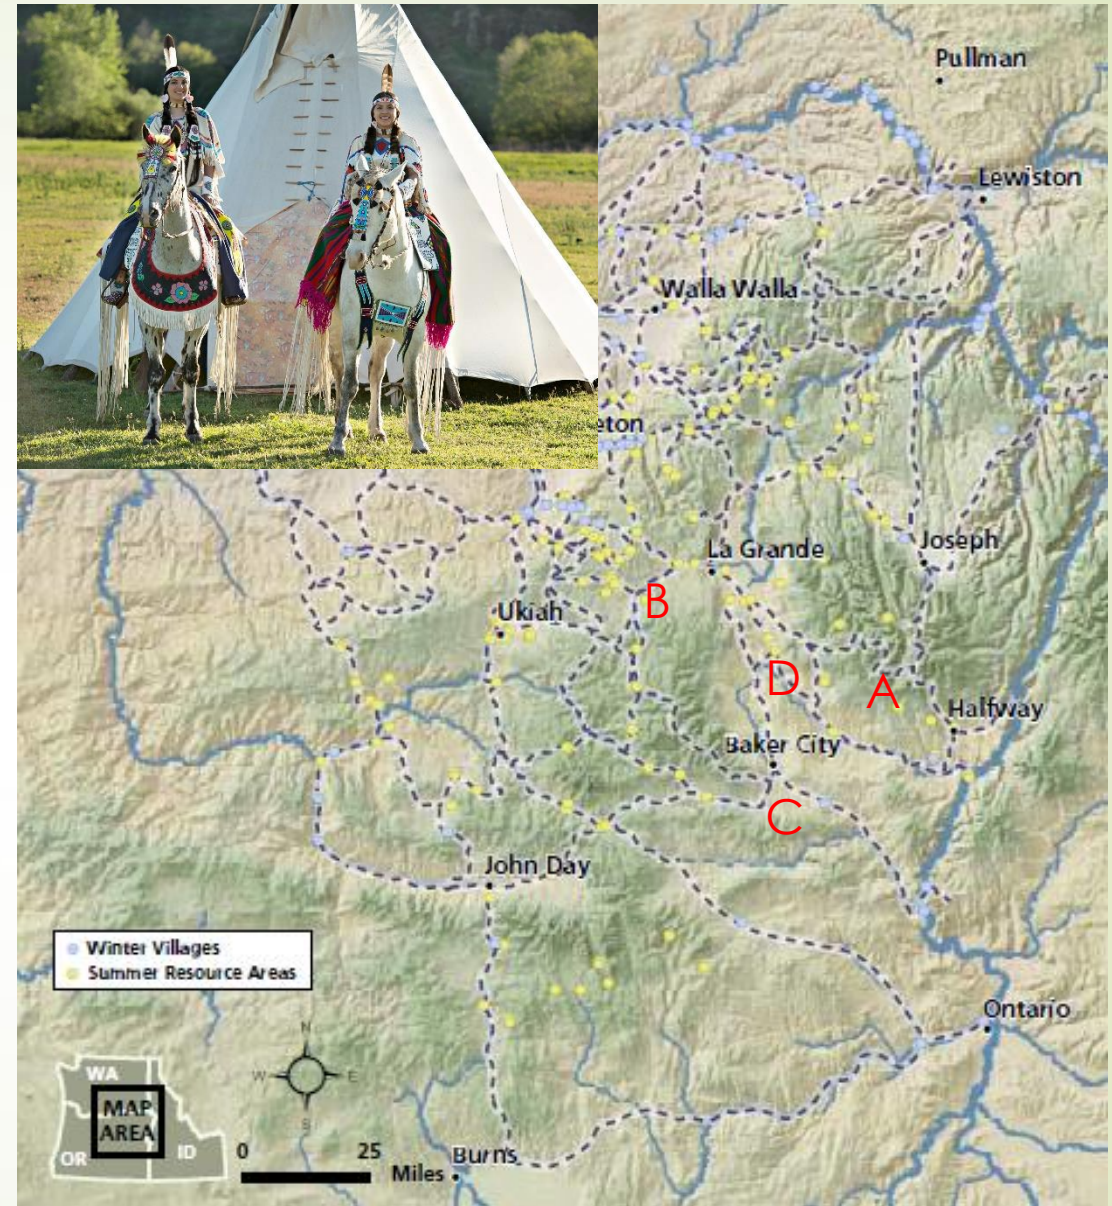

Many of our trails still exist – by different name

A - ʔlcaqítinma 'our trail'
Near Pyles Canyon, South of Grande Ronde Valley – Also known as the place of camas

B - Xáwtmi 'high trail/divide'
On the divide between Grande Ronde and Umatilla Watersheds – refers to an old trail and settlement on the ridge.

C - ʔliskít Tuulikéecin' 'trail thrown on top'
A trail that extends east to west across the peaks of the Elkhorn Mountains (Anthony Lakes to Baker City)

D - Peʔískit 'many trails'
A tributary to Fly Creek in N. Fork of Grand Ronde River drainage.

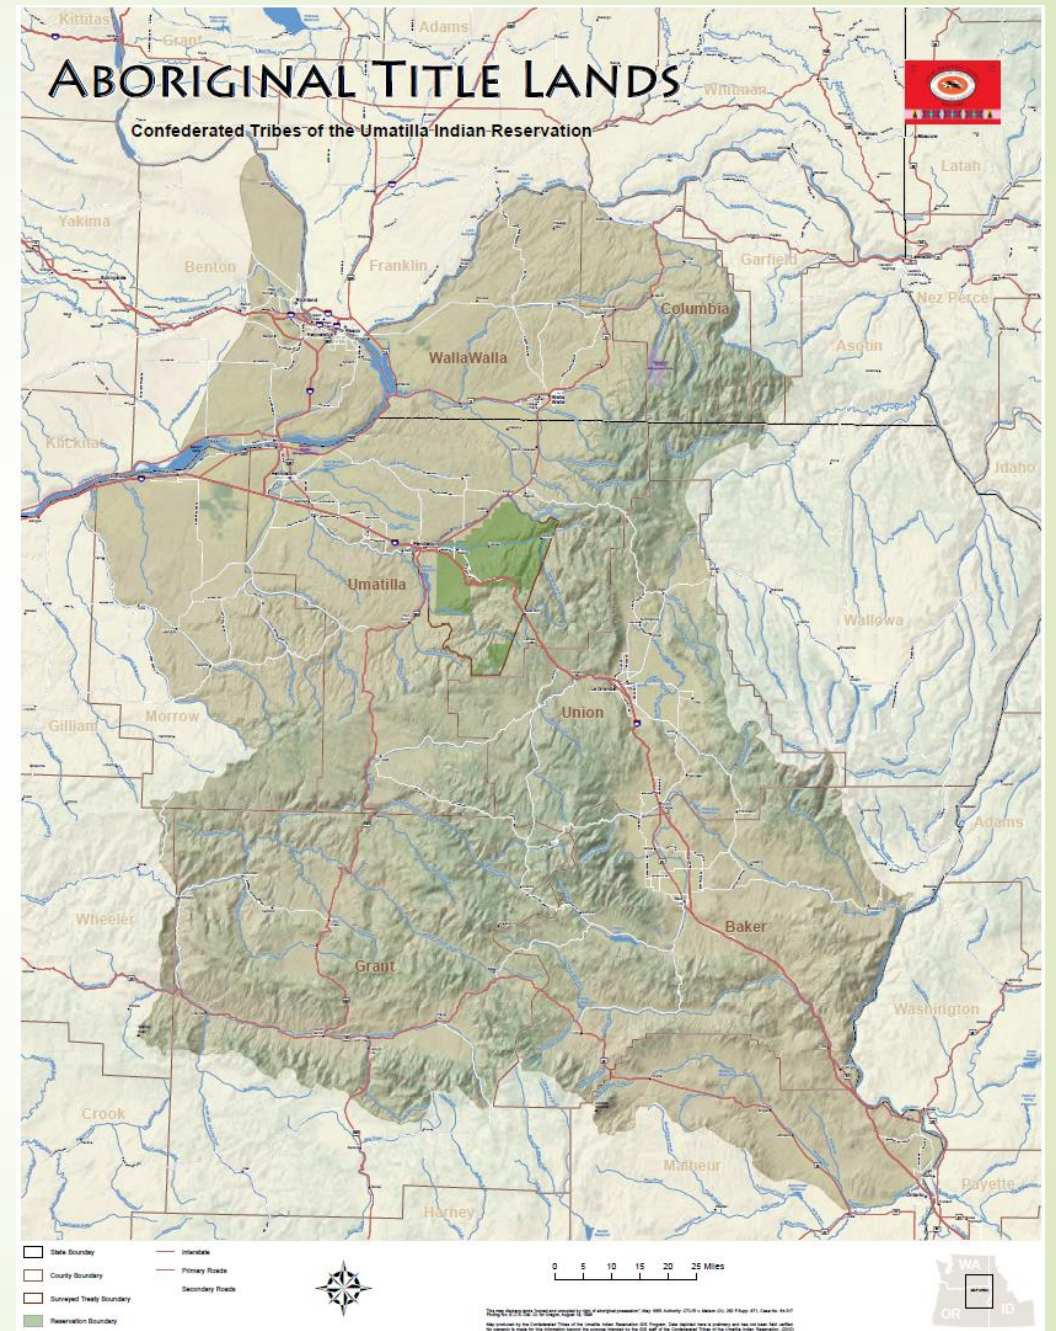

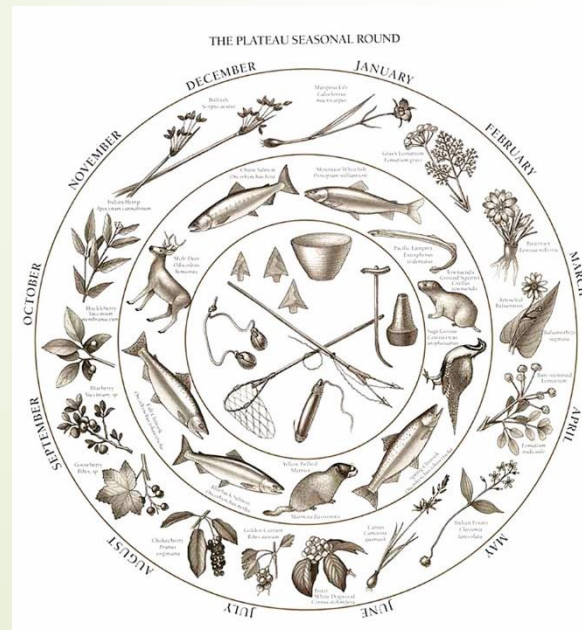

TRAILS. Watersheds in the seasonal round were connected by a well used trail system. Many of these trails later became emigrant trails. While many more trails existed, this map only shows well-documented trails.

Today

Practice our Traditional Rounds

Live with the Land

Steward the Resources

Oregon's Youth Outdoors

- Oregon Youth Conservation Corps (Created in 1987)
- Earth Conservation Corps/Salmon Corp
- Northwest Youth Corps
- CRITFC Salmon Camp
- Oregon Outdoor School

What do you want for your family, your community, your nation's future?

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mHzG _rf297E

